

The Carousel of Possible Dreams

You know the sensation from childhood of rushing on to the Carousel to pick your perfect horse? You can have it again.

On September 15 at 6 p.m., Super Bowl Champion and New York Giant Brandon Jacobs and other athletes, celebrities, civic, business, entertainment and philanthropic leaders will rush aboard the Carousel in Central Park and go around and around and up and down for children's charities.

And that's when the fun starts. Each rider is tasked with raising $5,000. Together, they'll raise nearly $300,000 for children. How long it takes is up to the riders.

And we are asking you to join them.

But what's truly wonderful is where the money will go. The Easter Seals Child Development Center at the Bronx School is a critical safety net for the youngest most severely challenged New Yorkers; children between the ages of three and five, many of them surviving in the streets, living on food stamps, and facing the challenges of autism.

The only question is, how long will it take you to hit your goal and get off?

The record is two calls. Think you can do it in one? Five? Twenty five? Just a word of warning that people may poke fun of you after about an hour or so.

Horses are still available! You may even want to challenge a friend to see who can step up and step off the Carousel the fastest. We promise this will be an event you will never forget.
